Gantt Chart is a very useful piece of software. It's a plan/project management software for scheduling. It is highly configurable and doesn't require a lot of knowledge to operate. The build-in schedule engine in Gantt Chart works on different methods. The most common one is a calendar with times which are meaningful to you, thereby you can say start at 8.30 and end at 2.00. This means the beginning and the end of the whole project is defined. But if you are a little too tired or don't have the time, you can also define a specific time for each of your activities. For example "Start at 8.30 and work until lunch. After lunch, start writing the report and make a dinner". There is no need to think if you start at 8.30 or not. You just start and do as much as you can in that time frame. The deadlines for individual activities can also be defined. If a certain activity is to be finished by the 10th, its deadline will be show as the 10th. If the deadline is set to the 17th, it will be displayed as the 17th. This makes Gantt Chart great when you are busy and want to know how much time is left for a task before it's deadline. In addition, you can give the duration of your activity in %. For example "20%" means that 20% of the project will be finished. When you have a percentage for each activity you can easily work out a useful time display. It is possible to define a color for each of your activities. You can assign a certain color to an activity that you want to be notified about when it has been finished. This is a useful way to know what still needs to be done. The important thing is that you find a way to schedule your activities the way you want. There are many different ways to plan your time. Each person is different and you have your own requirements. Find out which way is the best for you. You don't need a calculator, just look for a calendar and you are ready to go. Imagine living a life where all your dreams come true. Well, I'm sure you've heard it before. But when living your dreams come true, it will be a great feeling! Magic Hour is a powerful software that can be used for planners of all kinds.
