PushToTalk is a multi-platform open source VoIP client for Jabber. PushToTalk is a VoIP client that aims to provide a free, simple, and stable Jabber client for any platform. Skeptical about P2P VoIP? Let us introduce you to the light house of VoIP. P2P VoIP apps, when introduced, are faced with a major problem: they have to deal with millions of simultaneous users which leads to instability and a lot of crashes. The team behind

PushToTalk chooses to tackle these problems in a different way. Rather than developing a true P2P client, PushToTalk uses Jabber streaming which means they don't directly communicate with each other. They only send the packets to the server, which transfers it to the other users. If you have ever used Skype then you will immediately understand the essence of PushToTalk. P2P VoIP Apps are also an excellent source of information. You'll find tutorials, news, and a lot of other kinds of stuff. Several VoIP users don't like

P2P clients due to those reasons. PushToTalk is different. You have a lot of options to customize the client to your needs. With PushToTalk you'll be able to select whether you want to use a contact list or a group chat. Another new and interesting feature of PushToTalk is the possibility to use a mouse to control the client. You'll be able to transfer files in real time, schedule meetings, see who is online, or open your contact list. What is VoIP? VoIP is an abbreviation for voice over internet protocol. The term

"voice over IP" usually refers to a combination of two different technologies. The first one is called internet telephony or Internet telephony, which allows you to send and receive sound over the Internet. The second one is called Voice over IP or VoIP, which is a way to send and receive voice calls over the Internet. The two technologies are related and often referred to as Internet telephony. For those who want to learn more about VoIP, you might want to learn a bit about IP telephony. If you're interested in a useful for creating conference calls or running groups. Having said that, PushToTalk includes some handy features that will help you get the most of its potential. 1. You can record calls with the push of a button The program can record calls that are in progress. This allows you to have a second face on the calls, one that is doing the recording while having a private conversation. This feature is free and you can select one of the modes and colors to specify. The first mode is called "Analog" which keeps the original coloration of the original conversation. The second mode is called "Text" which changes the coloration to a black and white edition. The third mode is called "White" which allows you to record an audio file with a white coloration, so you can easily identify it. 2. You can archive calls You can archive calls that are in progress by pressing the Archive button. All calls will then be collected and saved as a ZIP file. 3.
