Field of the Invention The present invention relates to disk drive assemblies, and more particularly to disk drive assemblies having an actuator assembly that is coupled to a first member of a two-piece clamping assembly by a screw, wherein the clamping assembly secures the actuator assembly to the first member by co-axially interlocking the first member and the actuator assembly. 2. Description of the Prior Art A disk drive assembly is one of several types of data storage devices that are used to store and retrieve data for computer systems. A disk drive assembly typically includes a magnetic recording disk and a head or transducer actuated radially across the disk to write and read data to and from selected data tracks on the disk. In a typical disk drive assembly, the head is supported by an actuator assembly that is controllably positioned by a biasing force. The conventional disk drive assembly 10 shown in FIG. 1 typically includes a housing 12 that contains a hard disk drive. The hard disk drive includes a pair of spaced apart and substantially parallel spaced apart disks 14 and 16 that are mounted for rotation about a central axis 20 and a stack of rigid arms 22 positioned adjacent and parallel to each other to provide support for a suspension 24 (FIG. 3). The suspension 24 includes a slider body 26 that is sized to be positioned adjacent to the surface 28 of the disks 14 and 16. An actuator assembly 30 is positioned adjacent to the suspension 24, and includes a load beam 32, a flexure 34 attached to the load beam 32, and an actuator arm 36 having the slider body 26 coupled thereto. A flexure mounting tab 38 is located at a distal end of the actu 1cb139a0ed
